How a Pretty Typewriter Girl Won Wealthy Young Man's Love.

the joke gave tacit, assent to the old boy's suit. About this time word was conveyed to the son who had sought to be funny with his father that the old gentleman and the young woman had really serious intentions. He then set about to stop it. Going to the young woman, he said to her in his matter-of-fact way that be was decidedly opposed to a marriage between her and his father; that he had money of his own and would gladly contribute any reasonable sum that she might name rather than have the marriage take place. This was the first intimashe might name rather than have the marriage take place. This was the first intimation that the young woman had that the affair was growing serious enough to be looked upon as a certainty by the old gentleman's family. She very frankly confessed to the solicitous son of the aged swain that she had only been romancing and that he need not fear that she would take the office of step-mother to him. In this interview both were characteristically pleasant and frank, and they parted good friends and so on. The young man found it necessary to call again and again, and the young typewriter welcomed him cordially each time. And so visits have gone on, and the friendship his grown into love between them, and here is the romance. This ex-

They tried it and it did do it. To-day every trainman in America probably knows how to "saw by" two long trains on a short fide track, but until that inexperienced country boy worked it out of his noddle the practice on the old "Q" road had been for trains either to avoid meeting at such points or, when they chanced to meet, for one of them to run back to a longer side track

The London Spectator, pursuing its researches into Irish bulls, prints the following supposed letter of an Irish gentleman to his son at school, written by John Brougham, the Irish actor and dramatist:

"I write to send you two pairs of my old breeches that you may have a new coat made out of them. Also some new socks that your mother has just knit by cutting down some of mine. Your mother sends you ten dollars without my knowledge, but for fear you may not spend it wisely I have kept back one half, and only send you five dollars. Your mother and I are well, except your sister has got the measles, which we think would spread among the other girls if Tom had not had it before, and he is the only one left. STREET-CAR SPOTTERS.

How Street Railway Companies Keep Tabon Their Employes.

In the police court the other day, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer, a young man giving an assumed name was arrested on a charge of violating the sidewalk ordinance. He was fined the costs, as it was learned during the hearing that he is employed by two or three of the street railway companies here as a "spotter." The hatred displayed by street-car conductors and drivers for these monitors in their affairs needs little provocation, and as a rule the operators of the cars get to know their men in time, and are certainly well posted regarding their movements.

The "spotter" who appeared in the police movements.

The "spotter" who appeared in the police court carried a bunch of the blanks furnished by the street railway companies for his use, and their make-up is ingenious as regards details. The spaces to be filled in the blank report call for the day of the week, month and year, and the exact time of the day at which a car is boarded. The direction in which a car is going and the name of the cross street where the car is met, together with the number of the conmet, together with the number of the con-ductor and register, is also demanded. Then follows the details regarding the num-ber of fares recorded and a space for the "spotter" to tell of any nickels that may be "knocked down." The report goes further, and asks for answers to such questions as these: "Was the conductor polite? Was the conductor careless? Was he watchful as to assisting ladies and children on and off the car? Was he engaged in loud talk with any one on the car? Was the driver Simple reference to the term "spotter" is sufficient to bring on a storm of indignation from any or all of the employes of street railways. "Every time I hear of one of those fellows," said a St. Clair street driver, "I am reminded of what Superintendent Bowers, of this road, who is now dead, said of that badge of dishonesty, the bell punch, when it was first introduced. He refused to brand his conductors with them, and declared that the man who not smart enough to beat them was not ca pable of running a car. I could point out "spotters," any number of them, who are laughed at by the men of this road. I remember when the work was mostly done by women. One of them would get on the car, open a book, and pretend to be reading it, while she turned over a leaf to correspond with each of the passengers. That was the poorest game of all, but the schemes resorted to now are just as bad. If a man is disposed to be dishonest and is not a fool he need never be caught. No man on earth can get on a crowded car, as they all are at some periods of the day, and keep an account of all the passengers. The conductor, who is bound to go through the crowd and collect fares, has to keep his eyes open, and at that often misses one or work Mr. Hitchcock could set him at nothing but braking on a freight train, and disliked to give such work to him because of the lad's youthful appearance and the dangers besetting that vocation. The boy, however, pleaded until he secured the employment. On one of his first trips, if not indeed the very first, it chanced that his train met another freight train at a station where the side-track was not long enough to accommodate either. The conductors were discussing the question which train should back up to a point where they could pass, when the green boy ventured to sugget that neither need back up; that they could pass by means of the short side track if they worked it right. This occasioned a good deal of laughter on the part of the Different Countries.

That different manners and notions prevail in different parts of the globe is, of course, known to us all, says the New York Mail and Express. In some parts of the world the lips are brought together in token of love and affection, in others the tips of the noses. In some places to uncover the head is a mark of respect, in others to keep it covered. Among some nations black clothes are worn as a sign of mourning, among others white. In some lands the dead are buried horizontally, in others they are buried upright. In Western countries sick people pay their physicians as long as they are sick, but in China and other Oriental countries, physicians are paid by their clients. countries, physicians are paid by their clients so long as the latter enjoy good health. In Paris, domestic servants are encouraged to marry, as they are observed to be more set-tled and more attentive to their duty than when bachelors. In London, such marriages are discouraged, as rendering servants more attentive to their own families 423 J. BET. FOURTH AND FIFTH ants more attentive to their own families than to those of their master's.

In Paris certain funds are established for the poor, the yearly produce of which admits but a limited number. In London a parish is taxed in proportion to the number of its poor, and every person who is pleased to be idle is entitled to a maintenance. In Paris the poor are always contented with their pittance. In London they are so insolent that scarce one of thom will conde-scend to eat brown bread. The latter city has accordingly a much larger number of idle and profligate wretches than the yearly.

Great is the power of local custom, and if we take any of the principal events of life, such as death and marriage, we find the ceremonies connected with them differing most curiously in different lands; but greater still is the power of fashion, and the human family is rapidly and cheerfully submitting to its tyrannical sway; thus we find Oriental peoples eagerly adopting Western habits. In dress and manners the Chinese, Japanese, Hindoos and Turks are surely getting Europeanized, and to-day the Oriental youth, discarding his national garb, looks upon patent leather boots, tall yearly. garb, looks upon patent leather boots, tall hats and frock coats as marks of progress and civilization.

REWARDS OF INVENTORS.

Fortunes Realized from the Barbed Win and Grain Binder Patents,

The ups and downs of inventors are remarkable, especially the ups, says W. H. Osmer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Osmer in the St. Louis Giode-Democrat. While acting as a patent solicitor several instances came to my notice. The barbed wire patents, which have netted fortunes to their owners, have an interesting wire patents, which have netted fortunes to their owners, have an interesting history. The first patents were issued to a man named Kelly, living down East. About two years later a farmer at De Kalb, Ill., conceived the idea of keeping his unruly cattle in the pasture by putting short barbs of wire and then twisting it with a plain wire. This is known in the market as Glidden wire, being named after its inventor, Joseph H. Glidden. One day while he was experimenting with it a neighbor going by shouted: "Joe, you better be out harrerin, in your oats instead of foolin' away your time with patents." Glidden thought otherwise, and in less than two years received a bonus of $60,000, with the guarantee of a royalty on all made under his patents. For the year 1881 his royalties exceeded $174,000. The Appleby grain-binder, which, in being perfected, bankrupted the owners, Appleby, Parker, Stone and Bishop, by a loss of $20,000 eventually came to the surface with $150,000 foreach of the owners, while its present owners have realized over $1,000,000. In this reord, however, the fact should not be lost sight of that hundreds of inventors in this and other lives, and as many capitalists have witnessed the fading of their last dollar in schemes that never "panned." West Virginia Frauds.

The Democratic party in West Virginia has evidently made up its mind to cheat Governor Goff out of his election, and to prevent his taking the office to which he was fairly and legally chosen. The Gubernatorial Election Committee has thrown out seventy votes cast for Goff on the flimsy pretext that they were cast at the wrong polling places, although five elections have been held since the gubernatorial election with the same polling places, and no objection has been raised. In addition to this steal the committee threw out seventeen Republican votes on the ground of fraud, Goff's plurality is now only thirty-three, and there is little hope that under the manipulation of this committee he can maintain even that.

In an editorial discussion of this matter the San Francisco Post says: Se long as the Democratic party of the South persists in using the weapons of fraud and deceit to compass its ends there can be little hope of that spirit of genuine nationality which is so ardently desired by good citizens. The South cannot ask the North to join hands with it while it continues to interfere with popular rights as it does, and to set aside the result of elections to suit itself. In the North, if a Democrat is elected to office, no matter if his plurality be but one, he gets his office; while in the South, if a Republican is elected-a thing, by the way, which is seldom allowed to happen-he is swindled out of the office and a Democrat seated in his place.

There is not the excuse of the color line for this action in West Virginia, for the negro vote is not large enough there to be construed into a menance to the rights of the white citizens. In some of the extreme Southern States, where the colored population is very large, there is the shadow of a pretense of self-defense for disfranchising lot boxes, although it is nothing but a shadow; but in West Virginia there is not even that. There is nothing but the lust of power and the determination to rule by any means, fair or foul, to account for the action of the Democratic party in that State. General Goff is, personally, a man of high standnegroes and m nipulating the balis, personally, a man of high standing and excellent abilities, and would make a fine Governor; but he is a Republican, and so the West Virgini Democracy is going to cheat him out of the office to which he was unquestionably elected.

An eastern paper s. ys: The railroads between Chicago and the s-abord are still floundering about in their end-avorto find a way out of their difficulties. By the competing water routes, the subsidized Canadian railroads and their American allies have demorstized freight rates. To meet these cuts the through rates must be made to correspond a d under the operations of the luter-State Commerce law the local rate must be reduced law the local rate must be reduced proportion tely to the through rate. It what way the horns of this dilemma will be grasped by the Calcago rail roads will be an interesting study.

Rai roads from the first have They have robbed local customers in order to carry through freight for a trifle over absolute cost, when had they worked particularly for local traffic and accepted such through freight as came to such through freight as came to them they would have built up United States District Court of Ara business which no rival road could have taken from them. The Baltimore & Ohio was swamped on this shoal. Through all its early years it robbed the people along its line and worked for the freight of the Mississippi & Ohio Valley. The result was that other roads could outbid it for that trade and its local trade had never been developed. The same causes produce the same results the world around.

PATTERSON; N. J., June 29.-Later letails of the finding of six asphyxiated bodies in a den of 27 Ryle Avenue last night is revolting. Three of the female victims are less than 20 years old. Their names are Rella and Kate McNally, sisters, and Emma Wright. The other woman is Kate White, 24 years old. Godfrey Gertade, 70 years old; the keeper of the resort, evidently died many hours before the others. The body of an unknown Turk, aged 30, was found in a better state of pre-30, was found in a better state of preservation than the others. Broken China and toilet articles literally covered the floor, and filth abounded everywhere. Mrs. White, who was pregnant, sat in a chair near the window in a sickening attitude, and presented a horrible spectacle in death. All had evidently been crazed with drink, and, in a drunken brawl, evidently somebody tripped over the rubber tube which conveyed the gas from the irn pipe to the gas range. The windows and doors were fastened. The house had been the scene of two suicides and one murder prior to last suicides and one murder prior to last night's ghastly find. The most touch-ing incident connected with the affair was the frantic effort of the mother of the McNally sisters this morning at-tempting to see her daughters, whom she believed to be virtuous.

London, June 29.—A dispatch from Delagoa Bay reports a serious state of affairs there, arising from the railway troubles. A portion of the railway has been destroyed by the Portuguese. Ex-Senator Bruce and Auditor Lynch called at the associated press office and requested that as wide a circulation as possible be given them relative to the above: "They feel fully authorized in saying the above report is erroneous. They had occasion to call on the president several times, and on each occasion he freely expressed himself on matters pertaining to the colored race and they do not hesitate to say that his views upon that subject are fair and just, and will commend him to the approbation of commend him to the approbation of the colored people throughout the country. The last time they called on him was on Wednesday, when they presented the address recently adopted by a conference of colored men held at Jackson, Miss., on June 13th. That address, among other things, de-clares that Mr. Harrison is President, not of one section but of the whole country, not or one race but of all the races of which our citizenship is com-posed. His ambition is to destroy rather than promote race prejudice and sectional animosity. The Presi-dent has assured the delegation that dent has assured the delegation that his own position upon that subject could not have been more accurately and correctly stated. The colored men, he declared, should not ask to be appointed to an office simply on ac-count of their color, nor should color count of their color, nor should color be a ground of objection. In view of all these facts, it is the opinion of Lynch and Bruce that if the colored people will only be patient and confide in the President, they will not be disappointed in their just and reasonable expectations. Besides, the reasonable expectations. Besides, the appointments already made by the President, ought, they believe, to satisfy everybody that he entertains no such sentiments as those he is alleged to have expressed in the above dispatch. They assert positively that he entertains no such sentiments.

A One-Sided Fight.

SARATOGA, June 29. - Last night Billy Elkes of Saratoga, knocked out Jack McGee of Jersey. City, in the seventh round. In the first round the men sparred principally for points and both did clever work. In the second round the Saratogan knocked his man down and repeated the act twice in the third round. From the third round on to the finish Elkes did about as he chose with the Jersey man, knocking him down six times in the fourth expressed during life. The few flowers sent by friends were placed around the casket which rested in the east parlor of the old Cameron dence. Comparatively few looked upon the features of the grand old man, whose appearance was exceedingly life-like. The choir sang several appropriate hymns and then the Rev. Dr. Chambers, Pastor of the Pine-street Presbyterian Church, conducted the services for the dead. The interment was at Harrisburg cemetery.

Consular Appointments.

Washington, June 29.—The President made the following Consular ajpointments to-day . Wm. T. Sorrsby of Mississippi at Guayaquil, Edward C. Goodnow of Maine at St. Stephens, N. B., Daniel B. Hubbard of Massa-N. B., Daniel B. Hubbard of Massa-chusetts at Annaberg, Germany, Hugo M. Starkploff of Missouri at Breman, Wm. T. Gunell of New York at Man-chester, John A. Tibbits of Connecti-cut at Bradford, Robert W. Turner of Kansas at Cadiz and N. D. Sansome of Kansas at St. Johns, N. B.

The Shah to Belgium BRUSSELS. June 29 -The Shah o Persia made a visit to the works of Seraing to day, accompanied by King Leopold. A delegation of workmen waited upon the King. His Majesty shook hands with them, and addressing them, said: "You work in your sphere and I in mine; all workers are members of the same family and should join hands. Tell your com-rades that my feelings are implied in in the Belgian motto, 'Union and Strength.'"

A Natisfactory Trial Trip. BALTIMORE, June 29.—The gun-boa Petrel made a builders' trial trip yesterday. The vessel was loaded with a weight equivalent to her guns, ord-nance, coal and stores. She acted ad-mirably, making the run from dry dock to the lower entrance of Craig Hill channel and back in two hours distance, 27 miles—with a steady mo-tion under temporary trimmings.

A Righ-Toned Wedding. NEW York, June 29 .- Archbishop Corrigan this morning, at the Cathedral, united in matrimony, John V. Dahlgren and Elizabeth Drexel. The bride is the daughter of Joseph Drexel, and the groom is the son of the late Rear Admiral Dahlgren. The distinguished and fashionable filled the great building.

An Extensive Strike. ALTOONA, Pa., June 29 .- The indications are that the strike among the mountain miners will be far-reaching. About 15,000 men are out and the others are expected to follow.

A Surprising Verdict. CHARLESTON, June 29 .- The jury in the McDow case returned at half past twelve, after deliberating for two hours, and returned a verdict of not gnilty.

Sen Cotton, the Favorite Minstrel

On Wednesday evening next this enowned minstrel comedian, and his daughter Idalene, will make their appearance here in the new sensational drama "Nobody's Claim." They are supported by a competent company numbering fourteen ladies and gentlemen. The play is full of roaring commen. The play is full of roaring comedy, startling scenes and thrilling situations, in which all the latest songs, banjo solos and specialties will be introduced. It is almost five years since Mr. Cotton and his daughter Idalene were here together. Then they made a most decided hit. The little lady was but a mere child then, but is now recognized as one of the best soubrettes and greatest lady banjo player on the stage. Reserved seats now on sale.

A NUISANCE.

A Disagreeable Question Which Should be Promptly Settled.

Nick Hammersmith was circulating a petition addressed to the Board of County Commissioners yesterday, praying that body to set aside a part of the town for houses of ill fame. The petition sets forth that the "girls" had been driven out of the alley be-tween Virginia and Center streets and that they were scattered all over town; that a "dress making" establishment had been opened in a building belong-ing to Sam Bowman on First street that ing to Sam Bowman on First street that was attracting a good deal of attention. Mr. Hammersmith says he has watched for three nights and has a list of all parties who have visited the "dress making" establishment and he promises to make a scene in court unless the nuisance is abated.

M'll Hands Robbed.

Last evening's Virginia Chronicle says: The men employed in the construction of the stamp mill at the Occidental mine were robbed of coin amounting to about $100 last Wednesday. They lodge at the Prospect mine hoisting works, located nearly half a mile from the mill site, and the money tolen was extracted from their clothstolen was extracted from their clothing hanging in the hoisting works while they were employed at the mill. Several articles besides coin were stolen, including a pistol. No clue to the thief has been obtained, but he is supposed to be a tramp.

Burned His Mother's Barn. A barn belonging to the mother of Geo. Borchers, the baseball pitcher, was burned at Sacramento Thursday. Borchers was drunk and interfered with the firemen while at work. The Chief Engineer ordered his arrest, and two police officers had a hard struggle with him and got roughly handled. They finally got him handcuffed and took him to jail, where he was charged with argon. It is stated he humand

English Justice

When Lord Dudly and other noble lords were arrested in the raid on the Field Gambling Club the charge against them was dismissed by Jusities Hanny on the ground that "it would be absurd to fine gentlemen of wealth and position such a sum as six shillings and eightpence." The same week two small boys were convicted at Croydon of the crime of pitch and toss, and they were each fined seven shillings and sixpence and seven days' hard labor.

Well Invested. Miss Jane Holmes, who died in 1885, bequeathed $300,000 to the public charitable institutions of Pittsburg. The money was so well invested that it has already doubled in value, and wise management is expected in a few years to swell the sum to nearly $1,000,000.

Closing Out.

The Behring Sea Question Dis-

The Toronto Globe of recent date says: Brother Jonathan says in effect: will knuckle down to Brother Jonathan in almost anything the latter may demand. Hence it is, as we have said, barely possible that Brother Bull's ships have orders to stand against Brother Johnathan's pretenagainst Brother Johnsthan's preten-sions. If so, there will be exciting times before next winter. We be-lieve the Washington authorities will back down if firmly resisted. But what if they do not back down? Then Canada would have to face the worst. What then? Well, the Globe has always been very well disposed to peace and friendship with the United States. But we say the with utmost States. But we say the with utmost deliberation that it would be far better for Canada and Great Britain to face the worst than to submit much longer to unreasonable, unondurable Ameri-can pretensions. Patience has in this case ceased to be a circue.

Mrs. Potts Objects to Having the Jail Scrubbed Out

The Elko Free Press says: Mrs. Potts, confined in the county jail under sentence of death for the murder of Faucett, raised "Merry Cain" in that institution the other day, and Jailor Adams had to lock her in a cell. The other prisoners were set to scrubbing the floor, when Elizabeth observed in the sentence of th bing the floor, when Elizabeth objected to the proceedings, and in language more forcible than polite, ordered the workers to desist. Even after being locked in her cell she continued her abuse, and liked to scared Janitor Buckland out of a year's growth by yelling at him as'he passed along the corridor with a bucket of water. Adams says Jack jumped ten feet when the sound of her gentle voice struck his ear. Jack is always a little nervous anyway, and when the words, "Drop that bucket, you son of a be" hit him sideways, he thought his time had come. Josiah Potts, her husband, walks up and down the corridor most of the day, and seems to fully realize his awful doom. Their case has not been acted on by the Supreme Court yet. A Few of J. J. There is no longer any North or South, East or West, but instead the one great common country, thrilled from end to end with sympathy, busy from end to end with projects of help and succor. That is the bright side of these calamities. They bring out as nothing else could, the real unity and solidarity of the American people.

The Idaho Statesman of the 26th nst. says: Senator John P. Jones has bought the Stoddard mine at De-Lamar, near Silver City. Mr. Jones paid the full purchase upon the trade examination by three experts in his employ, hence a great deal of significance is given to the trade, and its influence is to strengthen all mining property in that district. As Mr. Jones has at once gone to work upon his perspect, we may suppose that the his property, we may suppose that the enterprise is to be pushed, and that we will soon know the real worth of the

And he had deep Websterian eyes
Beneath his brows o'erarching.
His mind kept step to that great tun
To which the world is marching.
Along fame's track we propleased
He due the fastest spanies.
His intellectual lightning gleamed
Like Northern lights in whites;
But yet, he exised the summer thro';
"Well, is this hot enough for you?"

He was no small poste; But yet he saked, hiser'tis true: Well, is this hot enough for you?'

And so his high Shakespearean thought
Was step by step arrested,
His elephantine intellect
Was gradually congested;
His lofty, intellectual dame
From day to day grew datter,
His head so ahrank and shriveled up
It terforized his hatter;
But still he said: "How do you do?
Well, is this hot enough for you?"

And now his thoughts are very crude,
Inane and embryotic,
He mouths and jabbers all the day
In manner idiotic.
The peer, old, hopeless imbedie,
The jest of all creation,
Lives as a warning to those folks
Who make this salutation:
"Good morning, friend, how do you do;
Well, is this hot enough for you?"

PARADE OF HORRIBLES

Falkney says I am not to go back to the store. The question is, what am I to do! Exercise! Fresh air! Aunt Mynton is right; there seems to be no prospect of my attaining any such luxuries."

As she lay there she watched Angelina Mynton trying to trim her last season's hat with three yards of crushed-strawberry-colored ribbon, and a bunch of yellow primroses. Evidently, Angelina was no milliner. She twitched the ribbon this way and that; she pinned the primroses first on one side, then on another, and ended by flinging down the bonnet with an exclamation of despair.

Phebe laid down her knitting needles.

A few dextrous folds and turnings of the ribbons, a dainty adjustment of the muchabused primroses, and Phebe held up the bonnet to Angelina's admiring grance.

"How do you like it now!" said she.

Angelina clasped her needle-pricked fingers in admiration.

"Oh, it's lovely!" cried she. "It isn't like the same hat. How did you do it, Phebe?"

"I don't know," said Phote. "I alway used to trim my own hats and my mother's. I like to do it."

I like to do it."

"You ought to be a millimen," said Angelina. "Only," with a sudden receilection, "Dr. Falkney says you can't be about as confining as any there is."

"Yes," as sented Phebe, with a sigh."

Dr. Falkney was a quiet, brief speken man of forty, and a bachelor at that. He had practiced medicine in the same location for ten years, and never felt that any element was lacking in his life until new. But on this brisk spring whoming he nat thoughtfully in his office, looking at the great skeleton that hung behind a baize curtain in the corner, and tapping his ruler on the table.

curtain in the corner, and tapping his ruler on the table.

"She has eyes like a startled deer," he said to himself. "And such a soft, sweet table! She doesn't chatterlike those cousins of here. She speaks in a slow, gentle way, that seems to rest one's hearing. And she is so utterly friendless and alone. Yes, I'll macry her, if she will have me."

When Dr. Falkney once made up his mind, he was not long in acting upon it. He went that self-same afternoon to Mrs. Mynton's and saked to see Miss Clissold.

"La!" said Mrs. Mynton, who sat at her everlasting mending backet. "Didn't you know! She's gone away."

"Gone does "Dr. Falkney looked surprised."

"Gone where?"

"Gone where?"

"Well, it's the queerest thing," said Mrs.
Mynton. "We don't know. And I don't ion, dector."

"My prescription!"

"Exercise and fresh air, you know. She said she'd be back at the end of a few weeks and let us know how it worked."

Dr. Falkney's jet-black brows contracted.
"And you let her go away like this!" said he. "So young, so loyely and so inexperienced! Where were your maternal instincts, Mrs. Mynton!"

Mrs. Mynton bridled a Httle.
"I don't abe what maternal instincts have

"Well, I'll do that," said the good dame.

After dinner Phebe set herself diligently After dinner Phebe set herself dingently to work to suit Mrs. Perkins with a new bonnet. Scarlet field-popues, black satin ribbon and a frame covered with puffed black silk took the worthy woman's fancy com-

she. "There's real style to it. Eight dollars! Of course I'll pay you eight dollars, Phebe! I expected to pay ten in Linley, and this is prettier than I'd have got there."

This bit of success took the edge off from the criticisms and carpings of Mrs. Deacon Root, who lived in the next house with her three daughters, who had none of them, to use her own expression, "any faculty fur fixin' up bunnits." And Phebe was com-pelled to "wholesale" the family for twen-ty-six dollars, which hardly more than cov-

"Hush, mamms!" said Angelina Myntos, lifting her finger with a gesture which denoted caution. "She hears you."

It was true. The black mist was floating sway f om Phebe Clissold's obscured vision; the words, which at first sounded like the distant buzzing from a bee-hive, now assumed form and distinctness.

"I am very sorry, Aunt Mynton," said she. "I will try not to be a burden on you. Indeed," with a faint smile flickering around her white lips, "I did not faint away on purpose; but the store was so hot, and the ventilation so poor—if I could have a few drops of water to drink"—

Phebe Clissold had been left an orphan at nineteen. Her nearest relative—a brother of her deceased mother—was a bank clerk in New York, and to him she had naturally directed her footsteps. He had succeeded in obtaining for her a situation in a great fancy store; and in this, the first quarter, she had ignominiously broken down.

"She can not endure long hours and Then she repacked her basket and once more set forth, under the blossoming trees and along the shady lanes, where dandelions sprinkled all the grass like drops of close confinement," said Dr. Falkney. "She must have plenty of exercise and fresh air. This store business won't do."

"Exercise!" bitterly repeated Mrs. Mynton, in whose heart years of privation and toil had well nigh soured the milk of human kindness. "But we don't keep a carriage and pair, Dr. Falkney, neither do we have time to walk in the park. Fresh air! We live in a nat, and the bed-rooms are lighted by gas and ventilated through the shaft, and things can't be helped, so far as I can see." me feel bad to think of never seeing Dr. Falkney's kind face again!" And for a moment the far-away blue of the April sky glimmered through a mist of unshed tears. "How foolish I am!" said Phebe to herself. Then she knocked at Mrs. Parthan's door had sold out all her stock and returned to the city with a considerable sum over and above her expenses.

"This," she said gleefully to herself, "I shall give to Aunt Mynton toward the cost I have been to her."

As she crossed the street toward the dreary, red brick walls of the "Ontario Flats," where the Myntons dwelt, with about a dozen other families, some one

"O! doctor," she cried, radiantly, "I have taken your prescription, and you can't think how much good it has done me!" The doctor looked as bright as she did herself. "I shall call to see you to-night," then she remembered, with a sudden crim-soning of the cheeks, that she had not yet

Wonders of Philosophy

The polypus, like the fabled hydra, receives new life from the knife lifted to destroy it. The fly spider lays an egg as long as itself. There are four thousand and forty-one muscles in the caterpillar. Hook discovered fourteen thousand mirrors in the eye of a drone; and to effect the respiration of a carp, thirteen thousand three hundred arteries, vessels, veins, bones, etc., are necessary. The body of every spider contains four little masses pierced with a multitude of imperceptible holes, each hole permitting the passage of a single thread, all the threads to the amount of a thousand to each mass, join together when they come out, and make the single thread with which the spider spins its web; so that what we call the spider's thread consists of more than four thousand united.
